Knowing that your home's furnishings and accessories were made in the U.S. can be a source of pride, as artisans continue the American traditions of ingenuity and skill that have resulted in countless beautiful creations. There are benefits for the U.S. manufacturers as well.

"We manufacture locally to allow us complete control of the process and enable us to create custom pieces both on a small and large scale," says Alex Segal, co-founder of Croft House, a Los Angeles-based company that specializes in handmade home furniture. "We're also inspired by the social impact. Building a workforce locally has been one of the most rewarding parts of our business."

These four furniture and flooring picks were proudly made in the United States:
